Did You Know?

NFL quarterback, Justin Herbert recently proposed to pop singer, Madison Beer with an impressive, elongated cushion-cut diamond ring. Its shape and higher length to width ratio makes it difficult for experts to estimate the carat size and cost, but most think it to be between 7-15 carats and worth between $300,000 and $1,000,000. Set in a classic solitaire setting, the ring has a vintage and timeless feel.

September Birthstone Sapphire. Second only to diamonds in hardness, sapphires are ideal for daily use and make beautiful additions to engagement rings. Sapphires are thought to ward off disease, bring peace and happiness, and have long been given as a token of love and loyalty.

BRILLIANCE YOU DESERVE®

Nothing embodies autumn like the warm, earthy hues of desert diamonds. Desert diamonds achieve their color from naturally occurring nitrogen that interacted with their crystals during formation that affect how they absorb and reflect light.

Completely one-of-a-kind, desert diamonds offer a unique contrast to colorless diamonds. Ranging in shades from light champagne to whiskey, these gemstones provide a versatile palette for any taste and style. There is growing appreciation for distinction and personality in jewelry, and these diamonds radiate originality. Gaining popularity in both engagement rings as well as fashion jewelry, desert diamonds are a symbol of luxury, sophistication and are a perfect addition to your fall wardrobe.
